Description:

Large and detailed antique folding map of the United States, published by Edward Stanford in London in 1894.

The map depicts hundreds, if not over one thousand, towns and cities, and hundreds of railway routes connecting them. The submarine telegraph connections between the United States and Europe are labeled and dated.

As the map was published after 1890 and before 1907, it features both Oklahoma Territory and Indian Territory to its east.

This is the latest edition of the Stanford United States map that we have handled.

Detailed Condition:

Dissected in 24 parts and laid on original linen. Original hand-color. Original case.
