Description:

Scarce and detailed early map of Africa, showing and detailing the legend of Prester John.

Published in Cologne by Johannes Bussemacher, this map was part of an attempt by early German mapmakers to establish a rival to the power of the Dutch publishers of the period, and represents the single most successful cartographic attempt at a world atlas outside of the Low Countries at the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries.

The present map provides a highly detailed account of the mythical kingdom of Prester John, including a lengthy text explanation in German at the left side of the map, which explains the lineage of Prester John, tracking back to Kings of Israel, before his lineage descended to Ethiopia.
