Description:

Battle of Saratoga with Extra Flap Showing Battle Progress

Detailed engraved battle plan of the end stages of the Battle of Saratoga, showing the maneuvers of British and American troops west of Bennington and north of Albany in the Hudson River Valley in upstate New York.

The present example includes an extra folding flap, showing different positions of the British and American Troops at different points in the battle.

The map was engraved by William Faden after a manuscript by W.C. Wilkinson. It sports an onlaid engraved flap allowing the map to communicate changes in troop positions over time. The flap shows the positions to which Burgoyne's army retreated on the 8th of October 1777.

This shows the closing stages of the Battle of Saratoga. General Burgoyne attacked Bemis Heights (here called "Braemus Heights") on October 7 after it became apparent that he would not receive relieving aid from Sir Henry Clinton in time. This battle culminated in heavy fighting marked by General Arnold's spirited rallying of the American troops. Burgoyne's forces were thrown back to the positions that they
