Description:

Fine example of James Rennell's highly detailed map of northern India, based upon his survey work while Surveyor General of the East Indian Company.

The map is exceptionally detailed and includes roads, towns, mountains, rivers and a host of other details. One of the most important maps of India from the period.

James Rennell is widely considered to be the most important and influential map maker of eighteenth century India. Rennell was appointed surveyor-general of Bengal in 1764, at the age of twenty-one. His first great work, "The Bengal Atlas", came out in 1779. It contained 21 maps and plans. He also created maps of the provinces as Behar, Bengal, Delhi, Agrah, Oude and Allahabad.

Detailed Condition:

2 sheet map (unjoined). Margins are ample. Could be joined perfectly (cost would be about $75 if done by us).
