Description:

Rare early map of New England and New York, published by Robert Morden.

Morden's map extends from Long Island (shown as an Island) and Manhattan to Casco Bay and centered on the Connecticut River and the Boston Area.

In 1675, Morden issued an earlier map of this region of a similar size, this is the substantially improved and updated version of the map. Many new placenames appear along Long Island and the contiguous coastline and in the Cape Cod region. The course of the rivers have been corrected and a key naming a number of towns has been added. Block Island appears.

This map was first issued in Modern's rare Atlas Terestris, first published in 1687.
