Description:

Scarce map of Poland, showing both the Dismemberment and newest boundaries, following the Congress of Vienna.

This map was originally published with a different title by William Faden in 1799. The map is based on the Rizzi-Zannoni 24-sheet map of 1772 that was commissioned by the King of Poland. An inset contains a bird's-eye plan of Warsaw flanked by tables of information concerning the population, religion, and languages.

A color key below the title identifies the regions of Prussia, Russia, Austria and the Kingdom of Poland.

This map would later be revised by James Wyld, adding a different border and imprint.
