Description:

Rare early map of New England and New York, published by Robert Morden.

Morden's map extends from Long Island (shown as an Island) and Manhattan to Casco Bay and centered on the Connecticut River and the Boston Area.

In 1675, Morden issued an earlier map of this region of a similar size, this is the substantially improved and updated version of the map. Many new placenames appear along Long Island and the contiguous coastline and in the Cape Cod region. The course of the rivers have been corrected and a key naming a number of towns has been added. Block Island appears.

This is the second edition of the map, which includes the page number 77 in the top right corner. The first state (1687), has no page number inside the neatlines (there is a page number outside the neatlines).

Detailed Condition:

Trimmed to neat lines, and laid down on an early sheet of paper.
