Description:

Marvelous highly detailed map of the United States from Hall's New General Atlas. The map provides a remarkable snapshot of the US in the midwest, old Northwest Territory, and the Plains, along with an early inset of Oregon Territory, with a 54-40 or fight border with British America, which Wheat notes as being quite eccentric for an English map. Massive double wide Arkansas Territory is shown. NW Territory is confined to Wisconsin, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and part of Minnesota. Indian Tribes dominate what would become Minnesota, Iowa and Dakota. The map shows Missouri Territory extending nearly to the Rocky Mountains, with excellent treatment of the Missouri River and its upper tributaries, extending west to Yellowstone River. Many unusual Indian Tribes named in Montana and Wyoming, including the Castahana, Nemou, Yepe, Keeheetsa, Dotames, Shieynne or Sharhas, Staetans or Kites, Ricarees, Mandans, Minatarees and others. The large inset of the Continuation of The Western Territory is based upon Lewis & Clark, extending from Big Horn, Clark's Fork and Yellowstone River in the east to Queen Charlotte's Sound and the Columbia and Muttinwah Rivers in the West. The Canoe Camp, Mt. Ranier, Mt. Hood and Mt. St Helens are shown. In the north, there are forts, Indian Villages and other details. A number of disputed boundaries with British America are shown. Excellent detail throughout. Wheat 381.
