Description:

Arabie by Alain Manesson Mallet, published in Paris in 1683, is a striking cartographic representation of the Arabian Peninsula, the Red Sea, and the Persian Gulf. This map provides an insightful view of the region, depicting various cities and subregions within the Arabian Peninsula, including Baharem, Mascalat, Mecque (Mecca), and Medina (Medine).

Notable for its decorative elements, the map features two dragons forming an ornate title cartouche, adding an artistic touch to the overall design. This decorative feature enhances the visual appeal of the map and reflects the stylistic preferences of the era.

The Arabie map is part of Alain Manesson Mallet's monumental work, the Description de l'Univers, initially published in Paris in 1683. Regarded as one of the most significant works of its kind in the 17th century, Mallet's Description de l'Univers encompassed a vast range of geographical knowledge and included maps
