Description:

Scarce large folio engraved map of the world in two hemispheres on a polar projection, issued by William Faden in London in 1802.

This scarce Faden world map appeared in the larger folio world atlases produced by the famous London mapmaker toward the end of his career.

The map shows the fruits of recent global maritime exploration (Tasmania has only just been separated from the Australian mainland three years prior), but much is still undiscovered, including in the interior of North America.

These hemispheres are often encountered as separate maps. It is somewhat unusual to see them joined together.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color in full. Two sheets joined as one.
