Description:

Final Battle of the Second Anglo-Dutch War

Large-format news-sheet, illustrated with 8 etchings printed from 3 plates, printed on 3 conjoined sheets.

Striking newsheet image of the Raid on the Medway, the final engagement of the Second Anglo-Dutch War. A Dutch fleet sailed up the Medway River, where it decimated the English ships then docked at the Chatham naval base. Several English ships were burned to the waterline, and two others were brought back to Holland as prizes.

The images were engraved by Romeyn De Hooghe and published with text in Dutch by Frederick De Wit.

Rarity

The view is apparently very rare. We note only the example in the Huntington Library.

This example of the view was previously offered for sale by Swann Galleries in 201.
