Description:

Rare map of the eastern portion of the Roman Empire and contiguous regions.

This map was originally designed by Michel Antoine Baudrand (1633-1700), a French Historian and Geographer, who served as secretary to Cardinal Francesco Barberini (then Dean of the College of Cardinals) in Rome, during which time this map was originally conceived by Baudrand.

The map covers the eastern part of the Roman Empire, including present-day Italy, Greece, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, Israel, Jordan, Iraq, Iran, and parts of Egypt and Saudi Arabia. The map is highly detailed, with mountains, rivers, lakes, and cities all clearly marked. The names of cities, regions, and countries are written in Latin, and the map also includes descriptive notes about the various regions and their histories. The eastern Mediterranean is prominently featured, with Cyprus, Crete, and the Aegean islands depicted in great detail.

The map also shows the various geographical features of the eastern part of Roman Empire, including mountains, rivers, lakes, and coastlines. The map provides a detailed and accurate portrayal of the size and complexity of the Roman Empire at its peak, and serves as a valuable resource for understanding the political and cultural landscape of the ancient world.
