Description:

A nice example of this scarce Ottens map of America and Oceana. California is shown as an island, based upon Sanson's model. The Great Lakes are shown with an open western coastline. The Straits of Anian are shown, with no Northwestern Coast beyond 40 degrees. A mythical Terra Esonis is shown extending nearly to California. The seven cities of Cibola appear in the Southwestern US. The conception of the Mississippi River is still very vague and pushed far west of its true mouth. The large lake in the Southeastern US first seen on Le Moyne's map is still present. South America retains its excessively wide format. A hopeful extension from Button's Bay is shown portending a possible Northwest Passage. In Oceana, Quiri Regio foretells an early Australian coastline. The map is embellished with an elaborate cartouche and vignettes of native villages and warriors. While De Wit's name appears on the map, there is some question as to whether the map was based upon the De Wit edition or the much rarer Justus Danckerts edition of the map. As with the Danckerts, this edition is rarely seen on the market and was unknown to Tooley and Leighley. McLaughlin 178. Minor toning and a bit of spotting in the margins, else a very nice example.
