Description:

Highly detailed map of South America, published near the conclusion of the Revolutionary Period which saw south America gaining independence from Spain. Includes several unique features, including a massive Columbia, which still incorporates Venezuela, Columbia, Ecuador and Bolivia, during the height of Simon Bolivar's activities in the region. Peru is divided into Perou and Haut Perou. Uruguay is still Banda Orientale. Argentina is divided inot sub-regions, including La Plata and Patagonia. A marvelous transitional map during South America's most fascinating period.
