Description:

Scarce and highly detailed map of the Caribbean, extending from the Southern tip of Florida and the Canal di Bhamà to the Yucatan, to the Easternmost Antilles and Trinidad, centered on Hispaniola. Includes a number of smaller islands, including the Caymans, Virgin Islands and smaller islands of the coast of Mexico. A marvelous note near the top of the map identifies Guanahani, the island discovered by Columbus, which is now believed to be San Salvatore. A nice dark impression, including rhumb lines. The copy has been cleaned and de-acidified, and shows a bit of discoloration on the verso, but only the faintest hint of the prior soiling nearly Margarita Island off the Coast of Venezuela. A nice example of this increasingly scarce map.
