Description:

Important early map of the Midwest, issued in the rare pocket edition of Finley's New American Atlas. Michigan is still a territory, with only 10 counties shown and only a small group of towns, the rest of the land being Miamis and Ottowas Territory. Illinois includes a number of massive northern counties, which stretch from the southern part of the state to nearly its northern border (Fayette, Edgar and Clark County), ending at the Sauks and Foxes Indian Boundary. Edgar County bends to the right, to include Chicago and Ft. Dearborn). Indiana is dominated in the North by two oversized regions, one being the Pottowatamie Indian lands and the other Kickapoo lands, with Allen County being the first formed in the North. The Northwest Territory is still shown, including a massive undefined Craford County, with the rest of the land shown being delineated for the Winnebagos. The map also extends into Missouri and Missouri Territory, including the lands of the Sioux and Ioway Indians. A number of early roads are shown, as are some early township surveys in Michigan Territory. Statistical Table includes information on size, population, historical populations and Capitals. A very nice example, which has been flattened, de-acidified and archivally backed. A few minor spots, but generally an excellent example of the map, which is rarely found in such nice condition.
