Description:

Nice example of the first regional map of America to show California as an Island.

This example is from the atlas L'Amerique en plusieurs cartes, published by Joannes Ribblius and Simon de Vries.

Prior to this map, all maps with California shown as an Island were either World maps, Western Hemisphere, North America, Pacific Ocean or some substantially larger geographical region. The region illustrated was still largely unknown. First map to show the so-called Second Sanson Model of insular California (two bays shown in Northernmost portion of the island). Nomenclature is a combination of Blaeu and Sanson. New Indian tribes named along the Rio Grande. The peninsula above California is a curious and unexplained addition.

A seminal map, which influenced California Cartography for the next 50 years. A cornerstone map for California collectors.
