Unrecorded 1871 edition of Gaylord Watson's rare map of the Western United States, published by Needham in Chicago.

Watson's map of the Western United States is one of the best detailed large format maps of the period and one of the earliest maps issued by Gaylord Watson following the termination of his relationship with Phelps. An example of the map dated 1872 is in the collection of the Huntington Library and is the only recorded example of this map. David Rumsey holds a variant edition dated 1874, with inset panels showing several major US Cities.

Detailed Condition:

Some discoloration along a few folds and one larger stain, but generally a good example of this very rare map.
