Description:

One of the most interesting early maps of the Texas, Gulf Coast & Mississippi River regions, from De Fer's Atlas Curieux.

De Fer draws upon the manuscript maps of Franquelin, De L'Isle and others. The map locates the Indian settlements found by Pierre le Moyne d'Iberville, founder of Louisiana, who explored the interior of North America under the service of Louis XIV, in order to defeat British claims to the Mississippi Valley. Also included is La Salle's information on his exploration south from Canada. La Salle was convinced the Mississippi flowed close to the Spanish mines in Mexico, making them accessible to the French. Shows early detail in Texas relating to La Salle's explorations & along the Gulf Coast & Southeastern Seaboard.

Includes separate page of descriptive text, which includes historical information and other details of the region.
