Description:

Highly detailed map of the Russian Empire at the end of the 18th Century, by William Faden.

The map is a significant advance from the earlier maps by Kitchin, Sayer and Jefferys, incorporating a number of important additions from contemporary explorers, including Cook's voyages in the North Pacific and the Russian Explorations in the northeastern part of Asian Russia, which flourished in the second half of the 18th Century.

The map extends from the North Sea and the Black Sea eastward as far as Siberia and the Behring Strait. The map reaches south to China and the Aral Sea and north to include the island of Nova Zembla and the Arctic. Combining Faden's detailed compilations and high quality printing, it is without question one of the best and most detailed maps of the whole of Imperial Russia to appear in a Commercial atlas in the late 18th Century.
