Description:

Decorative double hemisphere map of the World on a Polar projection, by the Weigmar Geographische Institut.

The map shows the extent of the knowledge and polar explorations through the early19th Century. As a result, there is no sign of any landmass where Antarctica will shortly be discovered and the NW Coast of America is highly inaccurate. The detail for the coastlines of New Holland is also very primative.

Detailed Condition:

Minor discoloration at centerfold.
