Description:

Manuscript plan for a proposed rail yard in Los Angeles, California, composed in 1907.

The rail yard was probably located in the Dolgeville Subdivision of Alhambra, California. Dolgeville was named after the Alfred Dolge Manufacturing Company.

This is the second scheme for the railyard, apparently accommodating 31 more rail cars than the first scheme.

Detailed Condition:

Ink manuscript on drafting linen, with pencil annotations and some minor soiling.
