Description:

Detailed plan of the Battle of Neerwinde, showing the battle fought between the French & English armies on the north side of the Gette River, between Leuven and Helcine, during the 9 Years War.

The Battle of Neerwinden (or Landen), in the current Belgian province of Flemish Brabant, was a battle in the Nine Years' War, fought on July 29, 1693, between the French army of Marshal Luxembourg and the Allied army of King William III of England. The French assaulted the Allied position three times before the French cavalry finally penetrated the allied defences and drove William's army from the field in a rout.

The battle was quite costly for both sides. The French losing 9,000 men to the Allies' 19,000, the French failed to follow up on their victory, allowing William to escape.

The plan provides a highly detailed look at the troop positions of the combatants and is quite rare. We were not able to locate another example at auction or in a dealer catalogue.
