Description:

Rare first state of Charles Desilver's map of the region west of the Mississippi River to west of the Rocky Mountains, issued at the end of 1855.

This rare early state of Desilver's mid-continent map still uses the old decorative border style characteristic of Cowperthwait's maps, published prior to Desilver's acquisition of the New Universal Atlas in 1855. While the map bears a date of 1850, the map did not appear in any edition of the atlas issued by Thomas Cowperthwait or Cowperthwait Bulter & Desilver and clearly could not pre-date the creation of Kansas Territory on May 30, 1854.

Desilver's mid-continent map is a remarkably unique work for the time period. The map is rich with early immigrant information, Indian details, forts, roads, Indian Treaty notes, early explorers routes, Indian Battle grounds, Indian Reservations, trading posts and a host of other excellent notes and features.

The map actually has its own symbol for trading posts, a rare appearance on a map of the period. This
