Description:

Rare later publication of Parke-Kern map of New Mexico Territory, the most important map of the newly formed Territory of New Mexico.

Lt. John G. Parke's map of the Territory of New Mexico is a landmark work in the history of the region. First published in 1852, the map covers the region from Pike's Peak to Cooke's wagon road in Sonora. Prepared in 1851 by Richard Kern, the map replaced Lt. J. W. Abert's as the primary source of geographical information on New Mexico..

Parke initially sent his manuscript map to the War Department, where it was printed and distributed to officers headed to the region and to others who specifically requested a copy of the map, but it was never bound into a report. The intention was to use the map as a base map for observations by field officers who were then sent to the region. As noted by Wheat, Park :

*Parke's published map is a remarkable production, both because it is a composite of the maps hitherto described, and because of the wealth of additional information contained on it. It would be of little assistance to attempt to describe this latter aspect of this map; it must be gained from a view of the map itself.... "The Spanish Trail leading from the Pueblo de los Angeles California to Abiquiu New Mexico".... The names along the upper Grand River, and in the valley at the head of the Rio Grande del Norte, are remarkable in that they here appear so early, and though this whole country on the north and west is labeled "Unexplored," this map must have been an eye-opener to Beale and Frémont, who passed through the Green and Grand area on their separate ways to California in 1853.

Because the map was never published in an official report and was only issued separately, it is now a legendary rarity, making this second edition the only example realistically obtainable for collectors.
