Description:

Scarce plan of the 1859 military procession of the Massachusetts Volunteers, published to accompany Bachelder's fine lithographed view of the same, titled: REVIEW OF THE MASS. VOLUNTEER MILITIA, at Concord, Sept. 9th, 1859. An inscription below the image commemorates the Battle of Lexington and Concord, fought on the same location on April 19th, 1775.

The plan can be seen as pre-Civil War northern military posturing and provides an excellent assessment of the regiments and commanders who, in less than two years, would head south in defense of the Union.

John B. Bachelder (1825-1894) was one of the premier viewmakers in mid-19th century New England; he was responsible for many town and city views, and showed a particular flair for sunlit landscapes, see Reps, Urban Views and Viewmakers, for a survey of his works. Aside from his work in that field, he is also remember as a preeminent 19th century historian of the Battle of Gettysburg.
