

Barry Lawrence Ruderman Antique Maps Inc.

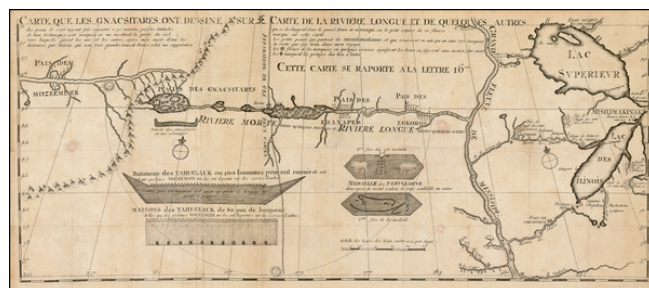

7407 La Jolla Boulevard
La Jolla, CA 92037

www.raremaps.com

(858) 551-8500
blr@raremaps.com

Carte que les Gnacsitaires ont Dessine sur ... Carte de la Riviere Longue et de quelques Autres qui se Dechargent dans le Grand Fleuve Missisipi . . .

Stock#: 39087
Map Maker: Lahontan
Date: 1703
Place: Paris
Color: Uncolored
Condition: VG
Size: 26.5 x 11 inches

Price: SOLD

Description:

First edition of this highly influential map depicting Baron de Lahontan's imaginary west-east Long River (Riviere Longue), rising in distant western mountains and emptying into the upper Mississippi.

The map extends east to the Great Lakes to show Lac Superieur, and Lac de Illinois (Michigan), along with a number of the early French forts and fur trading outposts. The detail in this larger format edition is noteworthy, showing the Pais de Mozeemlek, Pais de Gnacsitaires, the boats used by various tribes, a typical community house of the Tahuglauck and other notes on Indian life. French and Indian settlements are shown on all the major rivers.

Lahontan's map was one of the most influential of all mythical cartographic works, effecting the cartographic landscape of the upper Mississippi, Plains and Rocky Mountain Region=s for nearly 50 years. Issued in Nouveaux Voyages de M. le Baron de Lahontan dans l'Amerique Septentrionale, one of the most influential and fanciful works of its time. The map depicts the Longue flowing from the mountains in the west (Rocky Mountains), home to the Gnacsitaires Indians, and connecting to the Mississippi River. On the western side of the mountains is another river, presumably flowing into the Pacific, quite possibly an anecdotal reference to the Columbia River, which Lahontan may have learned about from the Indians.

Lahontan's concept was copied by virtually all 18th-century cartographers, including Moll, Senex, Popple, and De L'Isle, thus perpetuating the myth.

The first edition of the map lacks the longitudinal scale at the top. A number of later editions were issued, most of which are on a much smaller scale.

Detailed Condition:

Drawer Ref: Minnesota

Stock#: 39087