Description:

An excellent map of Alaska and the NW Coast of America and NE Coast of Asia, based upon Captain James Cook's Voyage to the region in 1778 and 1779 and revised by John Meares.

The map tracks Meares' expedition through the region in 1788 and 1789.

In 1786, Captain John Meares (1746-1801) was sent from India by a group of merchants intending to enter the fur trade in America. Meares' ship was named the "Nootka" & upon reaching the Pacific Northwest coast he ran into two other British traders, Captains Dixon & Portlock who warned him off the coast as he didn't have a South Seas or an East India Company license, which were required by marine law for English ships trading in American & Asian waters.

Meares collected some furs which he traded in China after wintering in Hawaii. In 1788 Meares took off again, this time from Macao for the Pacific Northwest, in the ships "Iphigenia" & "Felice" both without licenses & flying the Portuguese flag. Arriving in Nootka he raised the British flag, claimed it for England & built a warehouse & a schooner which he named the "Northwest America."

Meares' actions provoked the Spanish authorities who had also laid claim to the territory. After Meares' departure, the Spanish seized Meares' remaining ships which almost started a war between England & Spain. After some negotiation, Spain agreed to provide compensation for the seized ships & the signing of the Nootka Convention of 1790, which recognized British rights to the region & disallowed Spanish claims to the northern territories.
