Description:

Detailed map of America at the beginning of the 19th Century, in elegant full color. The map illustrates the US immediately after the Louisiana Purchase, and includes the massive newly acquired region. Very little is known about the interior of North America. The NW coastline is still quite speculative above the Columbia River, although the recent voyages of Vancouver, Mears, et al are filling in the details. Quivira still appears as an Indian City in the interior. An attractive example in full wash color.
