Description:

Fine dark impression of Giacomo Gastaldi's modern map of the Arabian Peninsula, the first modern map of the Arabian Peninsula.

Gastaldi's map is generally considered to be the first modern map to be focused specifically on Arabia. While maps based upon the work of 2nd Century Alexandrian scholar Claudius Ptolemy were printed as early as 1477, Gastaldi's map is the first to integrate modern cartographic sources into a regional map focused on the Arabian Peninsula. Gerald Tibbetts described the map as the first truly modern map of the Peninsula. Not only was Gastaldi able to present Arabia's shape and orientation more accurately than Ptolemy, but he also confidently plotted certain coastal towns-Jizan was one-for the first time, though much of the inland detail remained arbitrarily drawn. Gastaldi includes a fictional lake, Stag lago, in the middle of the Rub' al-Khali, a feature whose genesis lay in an area of water marked by Ptolemy, but expanded by Gastaldi and propagated by other wishful-thinking cartographers after him until its eventual deletion during the 17th century.

Giacomo Gastaldi was one of the most important Italian mapmakers of the early 16th Century. His set of maps for the 1548 edition of the 'Geographia' are among the earliest examples of his work, in a long and distinguished career. This edition was the first pocket-sized edition. Despite being prepared on a small format, the maps are clearly and attractively engraved. Gastaldi was the first to add regional maps of the American continent, with important maps of the eastern seaboard, a map of what is now the southern United States, of South America, and separate maps of Cuba and Hispaniola. Gastaldi published only a
