Description:

The First Separately Published Map of Florida

Fine example of Ortelius' seminal map of Florida and the South, plus maps of Central and South America, from Oretlius' Theatrum Orbis Terrarum, the first modern atlas.

A rare map of North America to be based upon Spanish sources, specifically Geronimo de Chaves, the Royal Cosmographer to Philip II of Spain. One of the earliest maps to show internal detail, based upon the findings of Hernando de Soto, as recorded by Gonzalo de Oviedo. This is the earliest regional mapping of the South and Southeast. The map provided the foundation cartography for the region, especially the river systems.

The map first appeared in the 1584 Latin edition of Ortelius' Theatrum. The Peru map depicts the regions conquered by the Spaniards in 1531-33, in today's Central America and most of northern South America. Guasteca shows a portion of east-central Mexico along the Gulf of Mexico coastline. The material was drawn from the Casa de Contratacion, one of the earliest examples of the dissemination of Spanish cartographic information from the New World.
