Description:

Adam Onis Treaty Era Map of North & South America

Fine pair of case maps of North and South America, with original slip case, published by Brue.

The map of North America was issued shortly after the publication of Lewis & Clark's map, with revisions to 1819. The map provides excellent detail along the Lewis & Clark Route. For the Rocky Mountains, the map relies primarily on information from Humboldt and Pike, pre-dating by several years the results of the Stephen Long Expedition to the Rocky Mountains.

Alaska is Russian America, with the map providing a still largely speculative coastline north of the Aleutian Islands and along the Arctic Coastline, with the coastlines known to Hearn and Alexander

MacKenzie, providing the primary source information on the Arctic Coast.

The map was issued in April 1819, which had been signed on February 22, 1819.

The map of South America reflects the state of the continent during its several decades of struggle for independence under the Revolutionary leadership of Simon Bolivar and others.
