Description:

Detailed map of Scotland, which first appeared in Kitchin's New General Atlas and was issued with updates for approximately the next 50 years.

The map was prepared by Admiral Surveyor Lieutenant Robert Campbell. Includes an inset of the Shetlands on the same scale and a table of distances on the stage routes.

This map was first issued by Marcus Armstrong in 1782. Robert Sayer's re-issue had extensive re-working of all four plates on the basis of information supplied by Campbell. The Northwest coast is slightly revised and the Western Isles entirely re-drawn except for the North part of Lewis. Some roads are re-drawn and some added. The map includes a new cartouche and title.

Detailed Condition:

4-sheet map, joined to form 2 larger sheets, as issued. Minor offsetting, as usual.
