Fine little world map, showing the latest discoveries, but pre-dating the explorations of Cook.

A partial western coastline in Alaska and Canada includes the note "Discovered in 1741," noting Russian discoveries. Another note, "Land discovered in 1741," notes an early discovery in the Aleutian Islands.

The British Colonies are shown with their boundaries extending to the Pacific Coast. Dotted lines show a potential River of the West connecting large lakes in Canada with the Pacific.

New Holland is partially formed and only the western coastline of New Zealand is delineated.
