Description:

A large, attractive, detailed, and accurate early-18th-century English mapping of Africa.

This map was created by the partnership of John Senex and Charles Price, two of the foremost English mapmakers of the first quarter of the 18th century.

Their map is far superior to the comparable one by Herman Moll, which was published shortly afterward. Indeed this map does not get nearly enough recognition for its accuracy.

The map is dedicated to Owen Brigstock.

Variations of the map were published by George Willdey, Cluer Dicey & Co., and Senex alone. All are quite rare.

Detailed Condition:

Repaired tear at right side, extending to the "Islands of Amirante" and several small repaired wormholes to the right of the coat of arms.
