Description:

Nice example of this fine 4-sheet map of India, one of the largest English language maps of India of the period.

Sayer's map is a fine combination of known information and blank areas where little or nothing is known. The map is dedicated to the Directors of the East India Company.

Jefferys' map of India was the most detailed to date, and of great practical importance during a period of British expansion in the area. Despite the detail, there are large parts of central India which are 'little known and in a manner independent.'

Detailed Condition:

4-sheet map joined as two. Old wash hand color by region.
