Description:

Scarce Italian Map of the Southern Colonies in Colonial America at the Outset of the American Revolution

A marvelous map the Southern part of Colonial America, published by Paolo Santini in Venice.

The map covers most of Florida, then extending west to Natchitoches and the Arkansas River, north along the Mississippi River to the Fort de Chartres area, and then east along the Ohio River, extending to include all of Virginia, the Chesapeake and most of Maryland.

While the map is described as a derivative of the work of D'Anville, it is uniquely Santini's configuration. The map shows Indian Tribes, mountains, rivers, towns, forts and a host of other early information.
