Description:

Woodblock kawraban sheet showing two foreigners, who it seems probable are American sailors, holding an artillery gun and a spear respectively.

The names appearing in the text which surrounds the two figures and the coastal scene on the left are the officials responsible for the coastal defense in the Kanto District, while the group of figures on the right are the officials responsible for the coastal defense in Nagasaki. In the upper band, there is a list of the councilors and high officials in the Edo government followed by the short description on the arrival of the American and Russian delegates.
