Description:

Nice example of this early map of the British Colonies, issued one year prior to the seminal map of John Mitchell.

The map is based largely upon the work of D'Anville. The map is quite remarkable for the time period, showing several early Western Roads and numerous English and French forts east of the Alleghany and Appalachian Mountains, in the regions that would become the focal point of the French & Indian War. Many Indian Tribes are located, along with over a dozen English and French Forts.

The Gisto Settlement of Christopher Gist is shown, as is Walker's Settlement of 1750 on the Cumberland River.

A number of other interestings notes and locations.
