Description:

Attractive hand-colored example of Moll's map of New France, including all of the modern United States to the Rio Grande River.

The map provides an especially detailed look at the regions between the Appalachians and the Rio Grande River, with a lengthy annotation from Moll on the name changes made by the French in the region, as well as annotations relating to La Salle's explorations in Texas. The Mississippi and its Eastern tributaries are pushed far to the west and somewhat distorted.

The map features Lahontan's Long River.

Many Indian Tribes and early forts and other settlements are noted throughout the map. The tracks of the Spanish Armada are shown tracing the Gulf of Mexico around Florida and the Bahamas and eastward.
