Description:

Attractive and detailed antique map of Southern Scotland, including the Highlands. One of the earliest obtainable maps of Scotland. Includes parts of the English borderlands and Northumberland, as well as Northern Ireland, bearing its Latin name Hibernia. Most text in Latin, though many places retain their Celtic names. Occasional English translations of major features. Portrays the Highlands as the diverse and densely populated country it was before the Clearances.

The detail on Scotland is extensive. Covers the country south of Torridon. Includes much of the Inner and Outer Hebrides, including Skye, Uist, Mull, and Islay. Includes abundant settlements, castles, lochs, mountain ranges, and rivers. An essential map for any collectors with an interest in Scotland.

Detailed Condition:

Old hand-color, possibly refreshed.
