Description:

Interesting early map of San Diego, with a map of Southern California on the verso.

The map includes a large inset map of La Jolla, with no streets between Palomar and Bird Rock Avenue.

Mission Beach and Pacific Beach are largely developed, with a note that the Mission Beach Car Line runs in the summers only. The bridge connecting South Mission Beach and Ocean Beach is present.

The most interesting feature of the map is the community shown north of the San Diego River on the southeast side of Mission Bay. This is the first time we have ever seen this community, which was never developed.
