Description:

Remarkable sea chart of the Coast of Patagonia, published by the French Hydrographic Survey.

The cartographic details shown on the chart are based in large part on two hydrographic surveys of the coast, the first being the expedition (1826-1830) including HMS Adventure and HMS Beagle under Phillip Parker King, and the second (1832-1836) being the voyage of the Beagle under Robert FitzRoy. The latter expedition is particularly noted for the participation of Charles Darwin who spent considerable time investigating various areas of Patagonia onshore, including long rides with gauchos in Río Negro, and who joined FitzRoy in a 200 miles expedition taking ships boats up the course of the Santa Cruz river.
