Description:

A Fascinating Marriage of Precise French Cartography and Dutch Baroque Embellishment

Fine old color example of this rare double hemisphere map of the world on a polar projection.

First state of Pierre Mortier's rare world map, which combines the 1657 double polar projection by Nicolas Sanson and the famous, highly decorative border scenes from the Visscher/Berchem map of 1658.

Mortier credits Sanson in his title. Australia is depicted as part of a massive southern continent. Greenland is connected to the Arctic regions. Both of these misconceptions have been corrected in the two smaller spheres, drawn so that Paris lies at the center, which appeared on Mortier's Mappe Monde of 1696.

The great mapmakers of the 17th and 18th centuries were notorious for borrowing and stealing the best of each others work, buying up the original plates when they could, or re-engraving their own versions of popular maps. This map by Mortier brings together elements from different sources, which, combined with rich original coloring result in a particularly beautiful and unusual world map.
