Description:

First state of Ortelius' maps of South Florida & the Caribbean, along with a regional map of part of Mexico, from the 1584 Latin edition of Ortelius' Theatrum Orbis Terrarum, the first modern atlas of the world. Ortelius created this map by himself, based upon a number of maps, including Mercator's 1569 world map, Guttierrez' 1562 map of America and Alsons de Sata Cruz' 1560 Isolario. The detail in Florida and the Caribbean is quite remarkable. the map extends from the tip of the Yucatan and names the Cayman Magnus and the Caymanes, provides excellent detail for Cuba, Hispaniola, Jamaica and St. Jois Insula (St. Johns) The treatment of the Bahamas, Virgin Islands, and the Windward Islands is also excellent for the period. Remarkable detail is given in southern Florida, although not necessarily in accurate fashion. Hints of the Florida Keys are clearly present, making this in reality a better chart of South Florida and the Keys than the Chaves map shown as one of the maps in Ortelius' Peruviae... The first state can be distinguished by the name Tropic of Capricorn in both maps, rather than the correct Tropic of Cancer. A nice full color example with wide clean margins Van den Broecke 14.
