Description:

Rare early Johann Baptist Homann map of Hungary and the Balkans, extending southeast to Albania and Macedonia.

Includes an elaborate allegorical scene illustrating the successful liberation of the region from the Ottoman Empire following the Siege of Vienna in 1683, with Ottoman fighters kneeling and surrendering their swords to a Hapsburg monarch. The view illustrates the Siege of Belgrade. The scale of miles is surrounded by 7 coats of arms.

The Great Turkish War or War of the Holy League was a series of conflicts between the Ottoman Empire and the Holy League consisting of the Habsburg Empire, Poland-Lithuania, Venice and Russia. Intensive fighting began in 1683 and ended with the signing of the Treaty of Karlowitz in 1699, which resulted in the Ottoman Empire's loss of its lands in Hungary and Poland, as well as part of the western Balkans.
