Description:

Battle of Saratoga -- Four Sets of Battle Positions on September 17, 1777 and September 19, 1777 (Battle of Saratoga)

Fine Revolutionary War battle plan, prepared in London by William Faden to illustrate the actions of the British and American Forces on September 17 and 19, 1777, during the first part of the Battle of Saratoga (Freeman's Farm).

Faden's plan shows Burgoyne's forces as they moved from their September 17, 1777 encampment at Swords House near Stillwell, New York on the Hudson River to the site of the first Battle of Saratoga at Freeman's Farm on September 19, 1777. Employing a "flap" system to illustrate two different moments during the battle, the map is also an interesting early graphic innovation.

The color coding for the map is:

- Red: British Troops
- Red/Blue: British Royal Artillery
- Green: Hessian Troops
- Pink: American Troops
- Red/White: Canadian and American (loyalist) Volunteers
- Pink/White: Savages (loyalist)

The Route taken by the German troops from Sword's House to Freeman's Farm for the battle fought on September 17, 1777 is illustrated in Green. The "Advance Route of the British soldiers to Freeman's farm is shown in red.

The Battle of Saratoga took place in September and October of 1777 and was a decisive victory for the American forces. Often referred to as a single battle, it was actually two battles fought eighteen days apart, the Battle of Freeman's Farm on September 19, 1777 and the Battle of Bemis Heights on October 7, 1777.
