Rare edition of Morden's separate-issue map of the British Isles, first issued 1678.

The title cartouche in the upper left corner is surmounted by the royal coat of arms and two ships sit beneath. Rodney Shirley describes the map as 'both striking and important'. The map includes updated cartography for Ireland, based on the wall map of 1674 by Morden & Greene, the roads of England and Wales from Ogilby, and several roads in Scotland.

The North Sea is filled with a genealogical table, originally running from William the Conqueror to Charles II, but this example extended to James II and his daughters, later Queen Mary II and Queen Anne.

Detailed Condition:

Old color. Evidence of an old fold split at the lower centerfold.
