Description:

1. Panoramic photographic view of Dawson City in Yukon Territory, likely taken by Sheelor at the later end of the Klondike Gold Rush.
2. Wonderful panorama of the town taken from a hill across the Yukon River. While at the time of this photo Dawson City was no longer the metropolis of 40,000 which it was at its peak around 1898, it was still at this time a sizeable, clearly active town, considerably larger than the 1,300 population in 2010.
