Description:

The Deschamps-Hausmann Plan of Paris

Important Early Modern Plan of Paris, prepared under the direction of Eugene Deschamps.

Divided into Arrondissements, the plan provides an exacting depiction of Paris at the conclusion of the multi-decade modernization of Paris undertaken in the middle of the 19th Century.

Deschamps plan illustrates the new layout of Paris, commissioned by Emperor Napoleon III and carried out by Baron Haussmann, prefect of the Seine. Between 1853 and 1870 the medieval streets of Paris were transformed into the modern city we know today, with wide tree-lined boulevards, squares and parks including the Bois de Boulogne. He also greatly improved the health of the citizens by creating new water and sewer systems.

Hausmann appointed Eugene Deschamps as Conservateur de Paris. Under Deschamps direction, a comprehensive topographical and geometrical survey of Paris was conducted, beginning in 1853. As chief surveyor, Deschamps was substantially responsible for the modern plan of Paris. Deschamps and his team were responsible for planning the project as a whole and were largely responsible for the outcome. As noted by Haussman, "le Plan de Paris c'etait M. Deschamps." (Plan of Paris 'was M. Deschamps).
